French missionary Dallet (1874) wrote in his book that Korean people and Chinese people are different. This means that Korean culture has another origin except Chinese culture. Some researchers tried to interpret several Persian words into Korean words (Park et al., 2019; Kim and Park, 2022). This time, the present author studied several Persian words into Korean words.

METHODS AND MATERIALS

The present author chose randomly several Persian words, and the author tried to find out similar meaning or same meaning between Persian language and Korean language. The author used a Dictionary of Persian/French and French/Persian in order to do the present translation (Bau, 2008).

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

The result of this study was described as follows.

The number, Persian word, Korean word and its meaning were written as follows.

number Persian word (its meaning) Korean word (its meaning)

0035 Dawr (circle) Dora (You, turn!)

0036 Arz ol balad (parallel) Araet-zul bala (You, paste the lower line!)

0037 Awaliyat (priority) Eo-ul-lyeo (It looks good for you!)
