Abstract: French missionary Dallet (1874) wrote in his book that Korean language and Chinese language is really different. Several researchers studied the similar relation between Persian language and Korean language (Park et al., 2019; Kim and Park, 2022). And now, the present researcher tried to know if there is close relation between Korean language and Persian language. The present researcher selected several Persian words randomly, and compared them with Korean words. The researcher used the Dictionary of Persian/French and French/Persian (Bau, 2008) in order to study the relation between Korean language and Persian language. The title is 'Are they similar or are they same origin, Persian language and Korean language? (0132-0144)'. The present researcher tried to compare 13 Persian words with Korean words. And the results obtained here is described as follows. <number Persian word (its meaning) Korean word (its meaning in English)> 0132 Gozashita (passed thing, before) Ggoza-eoss-da (I have stabbed, pinned, stuck) 0133 Gor (tomb) Golo-ganda (He or she is going to die, toward death) 0134 Gozar (passage for the river, for road) Gosat (a narrow alley, a small road in the village) 0135 Yunani (Greek, of Greece) Yunan-eul-ddeolda (make a big deal (out of), specially) 0136 Doxtar (daughter, girl) Ddog ddeol-eo-zyeo-yo (It was fallen as a present suddenly.) 0137 Hafez (The person who can memorize Koran) Yeobo!
